The first effect of thorough drainage is of course to carry off the surplus water from the surface to the full depth of the drain. On land which is too wet our cereals will not grow, not so much upon account of the presence as for the want of air which the water prevents from reaching their roots.

It is the idea of many that drains run "from the top," that is as soon as the water sinks to the depth of the drain it runs off; this in some cases may be correct, but not in all. Their exists in all soils what we may term a water-line, and its distance from the surface will of course vary with the structure of the soil and subsoil, if they are both loose it will be much deeper than when they are composed of clay or clayey loam.

Now, if the drain be above this water-line it will run but little water, only that which sweeps through to it as it passes downward, New Life inte all parts of the system, and building an IRON CONSTITUTION. but if the drain is placed below the waterline it will continue to run freely until it reduces the water to its own level, when, to borrow a phrase, it will only run off the water of absorption. To prove this we have only to try the simple experiment of filling a barrel with soil and making vents in the side at various depths from the bottom to the top. If water is slowly poured on at the top it will not, as might be expected, run from the upper hole first, but will soak down to the bottom until the lower portion of the soil becomes saturated it will run from the lower hole first, and if this hole can carry off the water as fast as it is put in at the top the water-line will rise no higher; but if it cannot, the earth will become saturated up to the next hole and run from it, and so on or over the top. Now, compare this barrel | sent PREE to may address. the sides will correspond with our drains, of the water in the barrel will also govern it in the soil.

As before stated, draining removes the water, enabling the air to penetrate, and hence is to a certain extent a practical deepening of the soil for the roots, which formerly existed only on the surface, which can now penetrate to the usual depth in search of food, and feed on a greater depth of soil, and of course can supply a much greater growth of CCROFULA.

We have often been asked whether drains should run up and down a slope, or whether they should run at right-angles to the line right-angles to the fall of the slope; nor are we sure that the other mode is correct. In angle of about forty-five degrees to the fall.

The idea with many is that draining can address only be of use in soil which contains too much water, or in soils which are called "too wet." This is a mistake, for draining will pay upon J. P. DINSMORE, 36 Dey St. New Y the very driest land, not because it is too dry or too wet, but because draining will equalize the amount of moisture in the soil, making it dry when rain has fallen and wet in the absence of rain by admitting air, and which always contains more or less moisture. which meeting with the cooler soil is deposited in the same manner as the moisture is deposited upon the outside of a pitcher full of cold water. This is an example which is familliar to all, and the philosophy which will account for it, will also account for draining making the soil moist in dry weather, and it needs no argument to prove that it | Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Sore Throat will make it dry in wet weather.

CHEAP PAINT FOR FENCES.

We find the following directions for making a cheap paint highly reccommended : Take a bushel of well burnt lime, white and unslacked; 20 pounds of Spanish whiting, 17 pounds of rock salt, and 12 pounds of brown sugar. Slake the lime and sift out which carries off more victims than any other discase and which baffl sike skill of the Physicians to any coarse lumps and mix it into a good whiteadd the other ingredients, and stirthe whole together thoroughly, and put it on two or Rapid in Relief, soothing in Effect, safe in its Oper three coats with a common brush. This is a cheap paint. Five dollars' worth ought to make the building look a hundred dollars worth better. This makes a coat that does not wash off, or easily rub off, and it looks well, while it will go far to preserve the wood. It is, therefore, especially adapted to the outside of buildings that are exposed to the weather. Three coats are needed on brick and two on wood. If you want to get a fine cream color, add three pounds of yellow ochre to the above. If you prefer a fawn color, add four pounds of umber, one pound of Indian red, and one pound of lamp-black. This will be more durable than common white-

Here is another recipe, which forms a hard orface, and is more durable than common

Take freshly-burned unslaked lime and reuce it to powder. To one peck or one oushel of this add the same quantity of fine use of your valuable medicine, and have always been white sand or fine coal ashes, and twice as uch fresh wood ashes, all these being sifted brough a fine seive. They should then be orougly mixed together while dry. Aftervards mix them with as much common lincod oil as will make the whole thin enough o work freely with a painter's brush. This ill make a paint of light gray stone color, scarly white. To make it fawn or drab, add woohre and Indian red; if drab is desird, add burnt umber, Indian red; and a litle black; if dark stone color, add lamphek; or if brown stone, then add Spanish wn. All these colors should. of coarse, e first mixed in oil and then added. This aint is much cheaper than common oil Grace's Celebrated Salve mint. It is equally well suited to wood, rick or stone. TOMIC AND RESTORATIVE,

By Physicians and Invalids in all parts of the coun-The new preparation. "Sarsaparilla in combina-ion with lodide of Lime," presents one of the most groups afterstive agents, in a form capable of exertand pleasant doses. It is conceded that the alternlive, resolvent, or tonic effects of loding are exerted most decidedly when associated with other after tives, in combination; and the Sarsaparitla sceme

o fulfill perfectly all the favorable requisitions. The first effect asnally observed when "SARSAPARILLA WITH IODIDE OF LIME" is taken, is an increase of appetite showing that it sat tonic properties of a marked character. Its alcrative effects are manifest in its ready combinatron with the blood and tissues. Pale, scrolutous women and children improve rapidly under its use, nd the vital functions assume a nealthy condition.
It is admirably adapted to a large number of chrone or acute affections pecutiar to children. It is suited to them both, by the middress and efficiency of nedicinal effect and the pleasant, attractive form of the remedy. It may be given for a long period where constitutional influences are desired, and no repug-nance, or disjuctionation to take the syrap, encountered. In White Swellings, Hip Joint Discase, am Distortions of the Spine, it should be given persistently, in moderate doses, until relief is obtained

In the Spring of the Year, and during the Warm Weather, the accumulation of morbid matters in the system seems to become manifest and very trouble situde, Benduche, Boils, Costiveness, Loss of Appetite. Pains in the Joints. Indigestion, etc., are very ommon. Nothing ever devised is better adapted to xterminate or drive off these affictions than this new mbination of SARSACARILLA WITH IODIDE

Alterative, or Blood Parifier, has ever before been placed within the reach of invalida Indeed, it is an entirely new and scientific combination, in no respect resembling anything hitherto em-The opinion of medical men concerning it the description of its chemical character, therapoutic vale, manner of use, etc., are given in a circular, which can be had at the store of any and all first class Draggists.
